PREFACE

This report presents statistics on the number of inhabitants of the State, its counties, and minor civil divisions (townships, New England towns, etc.). In addition, separate figures are also presented for urban places, wards of cities of 5,000 or more, and other areas of the State. These data are based upon tabulations from the Seventeenth Decennial Census of the population of the United States, its Territories, and possessions conducted as of April 1, 1950. Provision for the Seventeenth Decennial Census was made in the act providing for the Fifteenth and subsequent decennial censuses which was approved on June 18, 1929.

The major portion of the information compiled from the Census of Population of 1950 will appear in Volume I, Number of Inhabitants, and in Volume II, Characteristics of the Population. This report is a preprint of Chapter 7 (Connecticut) of Volume I, which is to present, in a single publication, statistics on the number of inhabitants for each State.

The materials presented here will also appear as Chapter A of Part 7 (Connecticut) of Volume II. Volume II will comprise a series of separately published parts, one for each State and a summary for the United States. The use of separate parts makes the basic materials on characteristics of the population for a given State available to the public in a single publication. Within the part for a State, Chapter A will recapitulate the statistics on the number and distribution of the population within a State; Chapter B will present statistics on the general characteristics of the population of the various political subdivisions of the State, such as counties, incorporated places, and the like; and Chapter C will present data on the detailed characteristics of the population of the larger areas within the State, such as cities of 100,000 inhabitants or more and standard metropolitan areas.

The materials presented here were prepared under the supervision of Howard G. Brunsman, Chief, Population and Housing Division, and Dr. Henry S. Shryock, Jr., Assistant Chief for Population Statistics, by Dr. Henry D. Sheldon, Chief, Demographic Statistics Section, and Charles P. Brinkman, Chief, Population Distribution Unit; the compilation of the statistics was under the direction of Robert B. Voight, Assistant Chief for Operations. The collection of the information on which these statistics are based was under the supervision of Lowell T. Galt, Chief, Field Division. The geographic work, including the delineation of special types of urban territory and the preparation of maps, was under the supervision of Clarence E. Batschelet, Chief, Geography Division.

CONNECTICUT

Number of Inhabitants

The State.—Connecticut was one of the Thirteen Original States. Its population on April 1, 1950, according to the Seventeenth Census, was 2,007,280. The State has a land area of 4,399 square miles. In 1950 there was an average of 409.7 inhabitants per square mile as against an average of 348.9 in 1940. Among the States, Connecticut ranked twenty-eighth in population and forty-sixth in land area.

In 1790 Connecticut had a population of 237,946 (table 1). In 1950, 160 years later, its population was more than eight times as large. In each decade of the period 1790 to 1890 the rate of growth for the State was below the rate for the Nation as a whole. In the following 60 years the rate for the State was higher in all but the decade 1930 to 1940. The increase of 298,038 between 1940 and 1950 represented a gain of 17.4 percent over the 1,709,242 persons enumerated in 1940.

Usual place of residence.—According to usual Census practice, which dates back to 1790, each person enumerated in the 1950 Census was counted as an inhabitant of his usual place of residence or usual place of abode, which is generally construed to mean the place where he lives and sleeps most of the time. This place is not necessarily the same as his legal residence, voting residence, or domicile, although, in the vast majority of cases, these different bases of classification would be identical.

In the application of this rule, persons were not always counted as residents of the places in which they happened to be found by the census enumerators. Persons in places where guests usually pay for quarters (hotels, etc.) were enumerated on the night of April 11, and those whose usual place of residence was elsewhere were allocated to their homes. Visitors found staying in private homes, however, were not ordinarily interviewed there. Information on persons away from their usual place of residence was obtained from other members of their families, landladies, etc. If an entire family was expected to be away during the whole period of the enumeration, information on it was obtained from neighbors. A matching process was used to eliminate duplicate reports for persons who reported for themselves while away and were also reported by their families at home.

Persons in the armed forces quartered on military installations were enumerated as residents of the States, counties, and minor civil divisions in which their installations were located. Members of their families were enumerated where they actually resided. In the 1950 Census, college students living away from home were considered residents of the communities in which they were residing while attending college, rather than as persons temporarily absent from their parental homes as was the practice in 1940. In 1950 the crews of vessels of the American Merchant Marine in harbors of the United States were counted as part of the population of the ports in which their vessels were berthed on April 1, 1950. In 1940 such persons were treated as part of the population of the port from which the vessel operated. Inmates of institutions, who ordinarily live there for long periods of time, were counted as inhabitants of the place in which the institution was located; whereas patients in general hospitals, who ordinarily have short stays, were counted at, or allocated to, their homes. All persons without a usual place of residence were counted where they were enumerated.

Urban and rural population.—The 1950 urban population of Connecticut numbered 1,558,642 persons, or 77.6 percent of the population of the State (table 1). The urban population was living in the 41 urban places in the State and in other territory included in the urban-fringe areas of the 6 urbanized areas in the State. More than three-fourths of the urban population was living in the urbanized areas (table 2).

The rural population of Connecticut included 448,638 persons, or 22.4 percent of the population of the State (table 2). Of the rural population, 68,381 persons, or 15.2 percent, were living in the 3 incorporated and 39 unincorporated places of 1,000 to 2,500 inhabitants (table 2).

Urban definition.—Under the urban definition established for use in the 1950 Census, the urban population comprises all persons living in (a) places of 2,500 inhabitants or more incorporated as cities, boroughs, towns,¹ and villages; (b) the densely settled urban fringe, including both incorporated and unincorporated areas, around cities of 50,000 or more; and (c) unincorporated places of 2,500 inhabitants or more outside any urban fringe. The remaining population is classified as rural. According to the urban definition used in previous censuses, the urban population comprised all persons living in incorporated places of 2,500 inhabitants or more and areas (usually minor civil divisions) classified as urban under special rules relating to population size and density.

In both definitions, the most important component of the urban territory is the group of incorporated places having 2,500 inhabitants or more. A definition of urban territory restricted to such places, however, would exclude a number of equally large and densely settled places, merely because they were not incorporated places. Under the old definition, an effort was made to avoid some of the more obvious omissions by the inclusion of the places urban under special rules. Even with these rules, however, many large and closely built-up places were excluded from the urban territory. To improve the situation in the 1950 Census, the Bureau of the Census set up, in advance of enumeration, boundaries for urban-fringe areas around cities of 50,000 or more and for unincorporated places outside urban fringes. All the population residing in urban-fringe areas and in unincorporated places of 2,500 or more is classified as urban according to the 1950 definition. (Of course, the incorporated places of 2,500 or more are urban in their own right.) Consequently, the special rules of the old definition are no longer necessary.

According to the new urban definition, the 1950 urban population of Connecticut consisted of the following components: (1) The 1,147,044 inhabitants of the 28 incorporated places of 2,500 inhabitants or more; (2) the 58,690 inhabitants of the 13 specially delineated unincorporated places of 2,500 inhabitants or more; and (3) 352,908 persons living in the urban-fringe areas of Bridgeport, Hartford, New Britain-Bristol, New Haven, Stamford-Norwalk, and Waterbury. Connecticut had four towns (East Hartford, Stratford, West Hartford, and West Haven) urban under special rule according to the old definition. The 1950 urban population under the old definition, therefore, consisted of the 1,147,044 inhabitants of the 28 incorporated places of 2,500 inhabitants or more and the 139,773 inhabitants of the four places urban under special rule. According to the new urban definition, 129,500 of the inhabitants of the four places urban under special rule were urban because they were living in urban-fringe areas and the remaining 10,273 were included in the rural population. On the other hand, the new urban definition included in the urban population the 223,408 persons in other territory in urban-fringe areas outside these four places and the 58,690 inhabitants of the unincorporated places of 2,500 inhabitants or more who would have been included in the rural population under the old definition. The net gain in the urban population, therefore, which resulted from the change in definition is 271,825.

Although the Bureau of the Census has employed other definitions in the course of its history, the statistics on the population by urban and rural residence for the years 1790 to 1940 are shown in accordance with the 1940 definition. The 1950 statistics are shown in accordance with both the new and old definitions.

Trends of urban and rural population.—Trends in the urban and rural population can be examined only on the basis of the old definition. On this basis, the urban population of Connecticut more than doubled between 1900 and 1950, rising from 543,755 to 1,286,817 (table 1). The largest numerical increase over the 50-year period was experienced in the decade 1910 to 1920, whereas the most rapid rate of growth came between 1900 and 1910. An increase of 128,655, or 11.1 percent, was recorded for the decade 1940 to 1950. Of the 20 cities and boroughs of 10,000 inhabitants or more in the State, 16 gained population between 1940 and 1950, with the rates of increase ranging from 0.3 percent for New London city to 55.0 percent for Stamford city (table 4). The rates of decline were moderate, ranging from 0.3 to 2.6 percent. In 1900 there were 108,027 persons, or 11.9 percent of the population of the State, living in the one city of 100,000 inhabitants in the State; by 1950 there were 605,026 persons, or 30.1 percent of the population of the State, living in the four cities of this size (table 3). The proportion of the population of the State living in urban territory rose from 59.9 to 64.1 percent over the 50-year period.

The rural population of Connecticut rose steadily from 364,665 in 1900 to 720,463 in 1950 (table 1). Both the largest numerical increase and rate of growth came in the decade 1940 to 1950, when the rural population increased by 169,383, or 30.7 percent. The proportion of the population of the State living in rural territory declined from 40.1 to 35.9 percent between 1900 and 1950.

Counties.—The counties in Connecticut ranged in size from Tolland with a population of 44,709 to New Haven with a population of 545,784. As in the previous decade, all eight counties in Connecticut increased in population (table 5). The rates of increase ranged from 9.8 percent for Windham County to 40.3 percent for Tolland County. The largest numerical increase was recorded for Hartford County, which had an increase of 89,472.

Minor civil divisions.—To the primary political divisions into which counties are divided, the Bureau of the Census applies the general term "minor civil divisions." The minor civil divisions in Connecticut are the towns. The incorporated cities and boroughs in some cases form subdivisions of the towns in which they are located and in other cases are coextensive with them.

Table 6 shows statistics on the population of each county by minor civil divisions for the last three censuses. The population of each city, borough, or unincorporated place is shown in italics under the population of the town in which it is located. When an unincorporated place lies in more than one minor civil division, the population of the several parts is shown in table 6 in the appropriate minor civil divisions, and each part is designated by "part." Figures on the total population of such places are given in table 7. Unincorporated places are designated by "uninc." Changes between the 1940 Census and the 1950 Census in the boundaries of areas listed are shown in notes to table 6. For changes in boundaries prior to the 1940 Census, see reports of the Sixteenth Census (1940), Population, Vol. I, pp. 181-182, and reports of earlier censuses.

Incorporated and unincorporated places.—There were 34 places in Connecticut in 1950 incorporated as cities and boroughs and 52 unincorporated places of 1,000 inhabitants or more. Of the 1,153,217 persons living in the incorporated places, 6,173 were in the six places with fewer than 2,500 inhabitants. There were 122,636 persons living in the unincorporated places, 63,946 of whom were in the 39 places with fewer than 2,500 inhabitants. The incorporated places ranged in size from Fenwick borough with a population of 16 to Hartford city with a population of 177,397.

Political units recognized as incorporated places in the 1950 Census are those which are incorporated as cities, boroughs, towns, and villages, with the exception that towns are not recognized as incorporated places in the New England States, New York, and Wisconsin.

The Bureau of the Census has delineated boundaries for the thickly settled urban fringe around cities of 50,000 or more and has also delineated boundaries for unincorporated places of 1,000 or more which are densely settled population centers without corporate limits. Although there are unincorporated places within the urban fringe, it was not feasible to establish boundaries for such places and therefore they are not identified as separate places.

The count of urban places in the 1950 Census includes all incorporated places of 2,500 or more regardless of location and unincorporated places of 2,500 or more which are located outside the urban-fringe areas. Incorporated places of less than 2,500 which lie in the urban fringe are not recognized as urban places.

Urbanized areas.—There were six urbanized areas in Connecticut: Bridgeport, Hartford, New Britain-Bristol, New Haven, Stamford-Norwalk, and Waterbury. Of the 1,211,381 persons living in the six urbanized areas, 838,466 were in the eight central cities and 372,915 were in the urban-fringe areas. The urban-fringe areas had 20,007 persons in two boroughs and 352,908 in the unincorporated parts (tables 2 and 9).

Each urbanized area contains at least one city with 50,000 inhabitants or more in 1940 or according to a special census taken since 1940, and some urbanized areas contain two or more cities of 50,000. Each urbanized area also includes the surrounding closely settled incorporated places and unincorporated areas that meet the criteria listed in the section below on "urban fringe." Thus, the territory of an urbanized area may be classified into incorporated parts and unincorporated parts. (See urbanized area maps.)

An urbanized area also may be divided into central city or cities and urban fringe as defined below.

Central cities.—Although an urbanized area may contain more than one city of 50,000 or more, not all cities of this size are necessarily central cities. The largest city of an area is always a central city. In addition, the second and third most populous cities in the area may qualify as central cities provided they have a population of at least one-third of that of the largest city in the area and a minimum of 25,000 inhabitants. The names of the individual urbanized areas indicate the central cities of the areas.

Urban fringe.—The urban fringe includes that part of the urbanized area which is outside the central city or cities. The following types of areas are embraced if they are contiguous to the central city or cities or if they are contiguous to any area already included in the urban fringe:

1. Incorporated places with 2,500 inhabitants or more in 1940 or at a subsequent special census conducted prior to 1950.
2. Incorporated places with fewer than 2,500 inhabitants containing an area with a concentration of 100 dwelling units or more with a density in this concentration of 500 units or more per square mile. This density represents approximately 2,000 persons per square mile and normally is the minimum found associated with a closely spaced street pattern.
3. Unincorporated territory with at least 500 dwelling units per square mile.
4. Territory devoted to commercial, industrial, transportation, recreational, and other purposes functionally related to the central city.

Also included are outlying noncontiguous areas with the required dwelling unit density located within $1\frac{1}{2}$ miles of the main contiguous urbanized part, measured along the shortest connecting highway, and other outlying areas within one-half mile of such noncontiguous areas which meet the minimum residential density rule.

¹ According to the new urban definition, the urban population comprises persons residing in urban territory but not necessarily in an urban place, which is defined as an incorporated place of 2,500 or more, or an unincorporated place of 2,500 or more located outside an urbanized area. Under the old definition, incorporated places of 2,500 or more and places under special rule are classified as urban places.

² Includes 362,908 persons in urban territory outside of urban places.

URBANIZED AREA MAPS

The six urbanized areas located in Connecticut, for which statistics are shown in table 9, are depicted in the following maps. The shaded areas, in combination, comprise the urbanized area. To assist in locating the exact external boundaries of the area, each boundary feature (street segment, political boundary, or other) has been assigned a number. The boundary segments thus numbered are shown on the map and the features to which they apply are presented in the following key.
